KANSAS PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION

The Kansas Public Health Association was organized in 1940 to strengthen public health in Kansas. It brings together individuals who are interested in maintaining and improving the health of Kansas citizens. The KPHA became affiliated with the American Public Health Association in 1943.

KPHA is a non-profit organization representing many professional disciplines and other interested citizens. Year-around activities of the Association include in-service training, a continuing opportunity for persons interested in health to exchange ideas, compare techniques, meet other people in the health field and serve on committees, serving as a vehicle for the direction and coordinating of health efforts, providing a continuing program of evaluating legislative action affecting health services and health programs in Kansas, and keeping the membership informed of new concepts and developments in community and public health.
